THE first sods are set to be turned at Terranora's latest development Altitude Aspire, where the titles on the first 43 lots within Stage One have just been released.

Settlements are expected to get under way within weeks on the first house lots in the sold out Stage One with some of the blocks forming part of the proposed innovative display village.

Newland Developers, the company behind the 280-home estate off Fraser

Drive, has made the most of the elevated topography, which takes advantage of spectacular views of the Tweed Coast.

Newland general manager Stuart Campbell said it was an exciting time now that Stage One titles had been released and buyers were starting to settle, enabling them to begin building the first homes at Altitude Aspire.

"Our vision for Altitude Aspire is to create a new innovative, master-planned estate for the residents to make the most of the Tweed Coast lifestyle," Mr Campbell said.

"Altitude Aspire embraces the site's natural attributes, with some lots taking advantage of the breathtaking views across Trutes Bay, through to Coolangatta and up to Surfers Paradise.

"The elevated position of lots at Altitude Aspire allows for a broad variety of quality home designs encapsulating the views from the ocean to the picturesque hinterland and the twinkling night lights of the coastal strip."

Altitude Aspire sales agent Lance Cotterill said Terranora was in a sought after area due to its close proximity to schools, clubs, medical centres, hospitals and shopping centres, and a short drive to beautiful beaches.

"This development has attracted a diverse range of local buyers who want to upgrade their homes for its location, value and overall quality," Mr Cotterill said.

"There's been strong interest from a broad range of demographics including first home buyers, families wanting to build their dream home, upgraders, second and third home purchasers and retirees.

"With Stage One settling, Stage Two already sold out and only limited allotments left in Stage Three and Four, Altitude Aspire is proving to be a popular choice among locals and interstate buyers looking for a location that delivers on lifestyle."
